Belmont Rescue Team Removes Bodies of Buried Miners

HEROIC UNDERTAKING IS COMPLETED AFTER EIGHTEEN HOURS WORK

After 18 hours of heroic effort, the Tonopah Belmont Development company's rescue team, headed by Ernest Cole, and assisted by F. Phillips, Mike Springer, Frank Springer and F. Hammis, succeeded in extricating the bodies of three Johnson and John Wiklund, Manhattan miners, who had been buried beneath a great quantity of rock since May 1.

The much credit cannot be given to the Belmont rescue team, as well as Charles Huber, deputy state mine inspector, for the work performed. While the work was under the personal direction of Mr. Cole and his assistants, who labored incessantly for 18 hours in a most dangerous undertaking, Mr. Huber was constantly on the ground framing timbers and doing everything possible to assist the rescue team, the only trained mine rescue crew in the state. W. L. "Dick" Taylor, superintendent of the White Pine mine, rendered great aid by furnishing lumber and other supplies that were so essential in completing the work. Mr. Taylor also had prepared coffee and food for the rescuers and remained with the crew throughout their hazardous labors.

The bodies of Johnson and Wiklund were removed from the place mine workings at 4:30 o'clock this morning. The task of entering the workings where the men were buried, was started at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning and before the extraction had been effected it became necessary to put in three sets of timbers and six stulls and hoist a great quantity of dirt.

When the bodies were removed they were found in a bad state of decomposition and it became necessary to wrap them in canvas, following which they were boxed and left in charge of C. T. Lawrence, acting coroner, who is to conduct an inquest this afternoon.

Johnson and Wiklund were last heard of on May 13 when they purchased an auto load of groceries and announced they were going out to do the assessment work on some property they owned. They drove to their placer property near the William Patrick mine, about two and one-half miles from Manhattan. Nothing more was thought of the miner until last Sunday when A. Kasper and J. Rota remarked about their long absence. It was then the two men started on a search for the missing miners. They finally noticed that the auto was in a garage back of a cabin near the William Patrick mine, and breaking into the house they discovered the groceries almost intact. A search of the mine shaft revealed that the men had chanted their hats for caps while other wearing apparel was also found. The alarm was immediately given in Manhattan, and a search was started for the bodies of the two men, the opinion being general that they had met death in the mine workings through a big cave that had evidently occurred. The search continued and on Tuesday night the head and shoulders of Wiklund were uncovered, but the air was so foul that the work of extracting the bodies was abandoned. The rescue team of the Tonopah Belmont mine was notified, as well as the U. S. bureau
